Breakthroughs. Every day.

COURSE OVERVIEW

It is estimated there are more than 3 million medically underserved people in the United States, many of whom are children. The United States Health Resources and Service Administration (HRSA) defines “medically underserved areas” as counties, urban census tracts or civil divisions with a shortage of primary care health services for residents. Medically underserved populations are varied and can include, but are not limited to, people who are homeless, low-income families or individuals, Medicaid-eligible families or individuals, rural communities, Native Americans, and migrant farmworkers.

To improve child health, we must seek to provide quality care to all children, including those in traditionally underserved populations and areas. This must be done through a multifaceted approach, including addressing racism, bias and violence, exploring bioethical questions, and examining challenges unique to different situations (rural, urban, etc.). Additionally, it takes the work of many types of healthcare professionals to provide integrated, accessible care for children no matter their situation.

The 2019 11th Annual CHOP Pediatric Global Health Conference will explore the intersections between domestic local and international global pediatric health to better reach the underserved here at home in the United States. We will take inspiration from innovative programs in the United States and around the world, and think critically about how to apply both South-North and national lessons to provide better, more equitable care in the United States. Attendees will heighten their awareness of existing disparities and sharpen their skills to both advocate and care for underrepresented patients. Stories of challenges and solutions, keynotes, breakout sessions, discussions, oral poster presentations, and a debate will equip each of us to be more effective providers for all of our patients, especially those who struggle most to access care.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this course, participants should be able to:

- Describe at least five innovative models for providing quality care for underserved U.S. populations
- Discuss at least three challenges to achieving health equity for underserved children in the United States today
- Identify at least three key ways in which to advocate for underserved patients

TARGET AUDIENCE

Physicians, advanced practice nurses, nurses, social workers, allied health professionals, public health professionals, researchers, trainees, students and anyone working or interested in the field of global health.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The conference will be held at Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia in the Ruth and Tristram Colket, Jr. Translational Research Building on the Raymond G. Perelman campus, Friday, Oct. 4, and Saturday, Oct. 5, 2019. The registration fee includes meals, drinks and snacks during the hours of the main conference (Friday evening onward), parking, and course material.
