

FINDING OUR VOICES: HUMANITIES IN MEDICINE

Saturday, Sept. 23, 2023

Roberts Center for Pediatric Research
2716 South St., Philadelphia, PA 19146

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

This conference will bring together a community of those who work in healthcare to build connection through poetry, literature and art. Participants will learn to use narrative skills, listening and observation to give voice to their experiences and explore meaning in their work.

This meeting is supported by a Distinguished Endowed Chair in the Department of Pediatrics

GENERAL INFORMATION

This in-person inaugural conference related to the humanities will be held Saturday September 23, 2023, at Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia in Roberts Center for Pediatric Research Building. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. on September 23rd. The registration fee includes continental breakfast, lunch, program materials and parking.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of the course, the participants should be able to:

1. Use narrative skills to voice personal and professional experiences in healthcare.
2. Develop listening and observation skills to improve delivery of humanistic healthcare.
3. Use literature, poetry, and art to find meaning, joy, and connection in their professional lives.

Breakout Sessions

10 a.m. Breakout Session I

A. The 55-Word Story/Poem

Each participant will write and share a 55-word poem/story based on a prompt related to their professional experience. Ten minutes of writing, 50 minutes of inspired discussion.

Jack Coulehan, MD, MPH

B. What the Other Feels: Storytelling as Ethical Practice

Dr. Mathieu will read an excerpt of her writing, followed by a writing exercise and discussion.

Irène Mathieu, MD

C. Writing in the Media: Lessons Learned

In this session, Dr. Han will discuss his experience as a surgeon and a writer and provide strategies for incorporating your passion for writing into a busy academic career. Ranging from storytelling to advocacy, your writing can be highly synergistic with your career in medicine, and take you down pathways that you may not have envisioned, but will find rewarding.

Jason Han, MD

D. The World Through a Lens

This workshop will explore the use of photography as a means of creative expression. The speakers will describe their creative endeavors and how this impacts their humanism as health care professionals. Examples of iPhone and SLR photographs will be displayed.

Bimal Desai, MD, MBI; Brandon C. Ku, MD

E. Read, Write, Reflect

Participants will read a poem together followed by a discussion and reflective writing on a prompt.

Laura E. Palmer, MDiv, BCC

11 a.m. Breakout Session II

A. The 55-Word Story/Poem

Each participant will write and share a 55-word poem/story based on a prompt related to their professional experience. Ten minutes of writing, 50 minutes of inspired discussion.

Jack Coulehan, MD, MPH

B. What the Other Feels: Storytelling as Ethical Practice

Dr. Mathieu will read an excerpt of her writing, followed by a writing exercise and discussion.

Irène Mathieu, MD

C. Visual Arts Within a Medical Career: What are the Possibilities?

This talk will first dispel the myth that art is a divine gift received at birth. It will then lay out a road map on how to incorporate art within a medical career.

Brian Dunham, MD

D. Writing for Advocacy

In this workshop, participants will learn and practice the fundamentals of Op-Ed writing, starting with the concept of credibility. Participants will practice honing the message, presenting and defending their position against counterarguments, and writing in a style that is direct and easily digestible. Participants will emerge with an outline for a topic in which they are highly invested, as well as guidance for submission.

Dorothy R. Novick, MD

E. Listening Beyond Words: A Workshop with the Penn Medicine Listening Lab

As human beings, we will all undergo a wide variety of experiences related to illness, caregiving, and our own vulnerability. Feeling deeply heard can allay some of the profound alienation, fear and loss. This experiential workshop will engage some of the powerful audio stories contributed by patients, caregivers and staff to the Penn Medicine Listening Lab. We will also work in dyads to share our own stories and listen deeply to one another to help cultivate a practice of hearing what might be beyond words.
